The Latin word was adopted in most of the Germanic langs.; the variants with vowel other than a are due, partly to loss of stress in the prefixed position, partly to Fr. influence: OE. sanct, OFris. sankt, sunkt, sant, sent, sint, (prefixed) sancte, sente etc., MDu. (chiefly as prefix) sanct, sant(e, sent(e, sint(e, sunte, sonte, Du. sint, dial. seint, sunt, sünt, Flemish zant, MHG. (prefixed) sancte, sant(e, sent(e, mod.G. (prefixed) Sanct, sankt, Da. sankt-, Sw. sankt(e-.

The forms sauynt, sauyn (printed sanynt, sanyn) in the Ayenbite are difficult to account for.]

A. adj. = HOLY, in various special applications.

1. Prefixed to the name of a canonized person (see B. 2), also to the names of the archangels: now felt to be the n. used appositively. Commonly abbreviated S. or St. (see below).

[In OE. sanctus and sancte (orig. the L. vocative) were used for the masc. and sancta for the fem.] The possessive of names preceded by 'Saint' is often used ellipt. in names of churches, as St. Paul's, St. Peter's. Hence various names of towns, villages, etc., as St. Albans, St. Andrews, St. Bees; also the anglicized forms of some foreign place-names, as  $^{\dagger}St.$  Omer's (= F. St.-Omer).

4. Attributive and possessive collocations of proper names with the prefix 'Saint' (St.) in sense 1. a. Many plants, animals, and other objects have been named after saints of the calendar. For these appellations see the saints' names in their alphabetical places or the ns. qualified by them.

b. Many diseases have been named after saints that are supposed to ward them off or relieve them.

A long list of these is given in Dunglison's Dict. Med. Sci. and Syd. Soc. Lex. For St. Anthony's, St. Francis's fire, see FIRE n. 12. St. Vitus' dance: see DANCE n. 6d.

c. Many objects are called after a place-name or a surname beginning with 'Saint' ('St.'); the following are some of the more important.

St. Augustine grass, a coarse grass, Stenotaphrum secundatum, native to the southeastern United States and central America and named after a town in Florida; St. Bees Sandstone, a pebbly sandstone occurring in thick beds in northwest England, formerly regarded as Upper Permian but now as Lower Triassic; St. Bernard (dog), in full Great St. Bernard dog, a dog of a breed kept by the monks of the Hospice of the Great St. Bernard (a dangerous pass in the alps between Switzerland and Italy) for the rescue of travellers in distress; St. Bernard('s) lily, a perennial herb, Anthericum liliago, belonging to the family Liliaceæ and bearing racemes of white flowers; St. Brigid('s) anemone, a plant belonging to a garden race of Anemone coronaria, bearing single or double red or blue flowers; St. Bruno's lily, a rhizomatous perennial herb, Paradisea liliastrum, which resembles St. Bernard's lily but has larger flowers (cf.
